Purpose of the Team Operating Agreement

This Operating Agreement serves as the guidelines and ground rules to help the project team work productively together over the course of the project lifecycle. The aim is to help you avoid disagreements about your approach to working within your team, and to help you resolve disagreements if they do arise. The agreement is a living document and may be updated as the need arises throughout the project. Any updates will be discussed with and ratified by the project team members and should be recorded in the sections on the following pages.

The template provided is based upon one developed by Dr Gary Wood for the Department of Mechanical Engineering.

You can see the example here: Team Operating Agreement Example.pdf.

Team Communications

Describe how project team members will communicate with each other. Include where project documents will be stored and how they may be accessed; how and when meeting agendas and minutes will be distributed; and how confidential information will be handled. List all team members' email and mobile numbers, Facebook name etc.; their preferred communication method; and any times/days that they are unavailable to be contacted. Set out expectations in terms of how people should be contacted and how quickly you should expect a response.

Communication will be done via WhatsApp.

Decision Making

Describe how project team members will make decisions. Everyone must agree on how decisions will be made to ensure that everyone can live with the outcomes, and to ensure that the project can move forward. Include guidelines for voting on decisions, how decisions will be documented, definitions of key terms, and what happens if the team cannot come to a decision.

Group discussion or team vote. Making sure everyone gets their opinion out there.

Meetings

So much project work and decision-making happens during meetings that it is important to establish how project team meetings will work. Address what will happen at meetings (generally). Establish who will be responsible for the facilitating, frequency, and scheduling of meetings, and attendance expectations. Plan to take notes in meetings and agree who is going to be responsible for doing that.

Talking about what we have completed, what needs to be done, and what concerns we may have.

Personal Courtesies

Outline the personal courtesies that team members will extend to one another. The contents of this section depend largely on the culture of your team. Do not assume that personal behaviours are understood and pay particular attention to any cultural differences if you are working in a multicultural team.

Give each other a bit of slack when being late (e.g. 5/10 mins).
